THE STORY OF THAI CELADON

BEHIND this modern stoneware from Thailand is a story that goes back more than two thousand years in time. Celadon is known as the aristocratic oriental ancestor of the pottery family and takes its name from the elegant glaze developed by the master potters of the northern China to duplicate their beloved opaque jade. The stoneware that arrived in the Near East was credited with miraculous powers. In this ever-turbulent part of the world where violence was a part of daily life, it was believed that poisoned food would change color when it was served on Celadon...

LONG before this happened, however, around the 14th century, a King of Siam visited China and brought back some 300 potters. Kilns were established and from them emerged the fabulous Siamese Celadons that were known as "Sankaloke". For several generations, large quantities of "Sankaloke" were shipped to the Philippine Islands, Borneo, India, Persia and Egypt. But the Kilns of Siam had to be abandoned, too...at about the time China were destined to give up their craft. For some 600 years, piece of the famous Celadon stoneware was produced.

ONLY recently, this ancient art was revived in Thailand...with a duplication of the old methods using the same raw materials. No synthetic, commercial dyes or clays are used in the production of modern Thai Celadon. All of the elements needed for this stoneware are from the earth and the jungles, and each piece is nished by hand.
